Metronome for polyrhythm practice

I'm building a metronome specifically for polyrhythm practice and I'm looking for feedback. Here's a demo

Background story

- I like playing with odd time signatures and polyrhythms, but
- it's hard to practice those things with a normal metronome
 - it's very hard to explain what I have in mind to other people (hey, so we're in 6, but you play every 3rd beat, and I play every 2nd so we are in 3 over 2 situation 🤔)
 - it's time consuming to overlay different time signatures and see what works, what not. I usually do it in ableton, it's not fun.

That's why I've decided to make that metronome.

Feedback

I'm curious how you approach this kind of practice? What were some of the bands / players that got you into playing with polyrhythms? Where do you find material for practice?

How to try it out

If you'd like to try it out, I'd be happy to give access in exchange for a bit of your time. DM me if you're interested.

The background of the image is a promotional still from the 1990 movie 'Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles II: The Secret of the Ooze'. It features the four turtles—Leonardo (blue mask), Donatello (purple mask), Michelangelo (orange mask), and Raphael (red mask)—along with their mentor Splinter (a rat in a suit). They are posed in a dynamic, action-oriented manner. The text is overlaid on this image.
